User Relay Interview

I want to contribute to Japan as an IT professional.

I have been working in IT for about 12 years with two friends, but we started a company because we thought it would be good to use our expertise (mobile applications, IT networking, cybersecurity) in Japan.

I am from India, and there are many IT experts in India. In addition, Japan-India relations are also good at present. In this situation, I thought that Japan needs more IT experts. For example, cybersecurity problems are occurring frequently in Japan. Since we are experts in these areas, we thought that Japan needs such experts and that the demand will increase in the future. However, on the other hand, I think that it takes money and time to train such experts in Japan. In India, some companies offer programs to train IT experts, for six months to one year. We are currently promoting projects from customers, but in the future we would like to teach IT expertise to students. In Japan, we would like to provide a place where people can learn it more casually. Currently, we are involved in IT development and IT solutions, but in the future, we would like to work in IT recruitment and temporary staffing, and personally, I would like to open a restaurant where you can eat halal food.

Aiming for nationwide expansion from Tokyo

Tokyo is the largest city in Japan, and most of the head offices are concentrated in Tokyo, where we thought there would be many business opportunities. Therefore we opened our business in Tokyo. However, you can open an IT business anywhere, so we hope to eventually expand our business nationwide.

The staff and experts at TOSBEC explained things we didn't understand in a simple and thorough manner.

A friend recommended TOSBEC to me and I saw their website. I thought it would be difficult to open a company in Japan, but my friend introduced me to TOSBEC because it allows you to complete the procedures in one stop and you can easily get advice. There is a legal affairs bureau in Edogawa Ward, where my company is currently located, but TOSBEC explained the procedures slowly and simply so that we could understand, and helped us with everything from creating the articles of incorporation to registering the company. In Japan, it is often difficult if you do not understand Japanese, but TOSBEC carefully answered our questions no matter how many times we asked. Thanks to TOSBEC's careful support from start to finish, it only took about a month to open the company. I was really glad that we used TOSBEC.

One point of advice from me

Anyone who wants to start a business should go to TOSBEC first! TOSBEC really helped me out a lot. From the receptionist to the counselors, I was treated very well. I recommend using TOSBEC.
